

Havdalah

The Art of Words... and a Touch of Schmaltz

With Sabrina Orah Marks and Melisa Cahnmann-Taylor

7:00 PM, Nov. 21, 2020

Congregation Children of Israel, Athens GA, Via Zoom

As we bid farewell to the Sabbath and welcome in the new week, two Athens poets — Sabrina Orah Mark and Melisa (Misha) Cahnmann-Taylor— will read poetry and prose exploring how their Jewish identities affect their writing, thinking, speaking, and prayer.

MELISA "Misha" CAHNMANN-TAYLOR is Professor of Language and Literacy Education at the University of Georgia. She is a prolific author and an award winning educator, scholar, and poet. She currently serves as a Fulbright Ambassador Alum speaking worldwide about the power of poetry and theatre in teaching languages. Many of her poems, essays, and articles are linked on her blog: <http://teachersactup.com>. Misha lives in Athens, GA with her husband, two children and their rescue dog, Bagel.

SABRINA ORAH MARK is the author of the poetry collections, The Babies & Tsim Tsum. Wild Milk, her first book of fiction, is recently out from Dorothy, a publishing project. Happily, her collection of essays on fairytales and motherhood which began as a monthly column in The Paris Review, is forthcoming from Random House. Sabrina shelters and writes in Athens where she lives with her husband and two sons. You can read more about her
